MOORE+
FAMILY PHARMACY
MI

Ryan Moore & Kerri Moore

What's Prior Authorization?

Back in the day, when you had a medical problem, you went to the doctor, he diagnosed the problem and wrote you a prescription. The pharmacist interpreted the doctor's chicken scratching and filled the prescription. You paid the price of the medicine, and it was usually no more than $10.00. You took it, you got well.

Nowadays, it can be a much more complicated process. Not surprisingly, it's all about the money. Drugs are very expensive, especially the new miracle drugs on the market. Most folks have a benefit manager that negotiates the price of your medicine between the insurance company that pays the bills and the pharmacy.

Because the benefit managers are so large, they also negotiate with the drug makers to get a better deal for themselves if they influence the doctor to change to something they get a deal on. The benefit manager may pass along some of the savings to the patient if they agree to get the doctor to change to a preferred drug. Our pharmacists work to help the prescriber find those less expensive alternatives.

But sometimes, the drug that is best for the patient is not covered by the benefit manager. In these cases, we tell the prescriber to call the benefit manager for a "prior authorization." The benefit manager wants to know why they should pay for a more expensive therapy instead of the one they prefer. It becomes a debate as to why the doctor knows better than the insurance company. Sometimes the doctor wins, sometimes it's the benefit manager. Hopefully, the patient's best interest is kept in mind.

We want to help navigate the treacherous dealings with benefit managers. We understand that you expect your insurance to cover your healthcare needs and we work together with all parties involved for your best outcome. Thank you for trusting us.

Plank's Tavern is the Premier Waterfront Dining in St. Joseph

Plank's Tavern is on one of the oldest harbors in the Great Lakes. It takes inspiration from the place it's in, the people who live here and the past it comes from. It's about our American food and drink, the abundance of our agriculture, the beauty of our land and water and our spirit of community and hospitality. Join us inside, or outside as we have seating both places, and plenty of beautiful views. The Sunday brunch buffet is a common favorite, but join us any afternoon for some delicious food, as we cater both brunch and dinner daily. We look forward to seeing and serving you!
